i suspect that this is one thing about which no one in the republican party will complain -- even if they disagree with bush's policies on iraq, and even if they think he was wrong in taking the country into a war for his own personal and political motives. in 2003, the u.s. congress passed the pittman-robertson (public hunting and conservation) modernization act of 2003. the act raised the hunting and fishing excise tax from 15% to 20%, reduced excise tax rates for some sportsmen, and provided state excise tax relief. some of the measure's supporters said that the $2.6 billion tax would help reduce the budget deficit. protester wilson also turned anger into more peaceful action. a north carolina representative, he had outraged the south by reporting it to president polk and urging him to recall all federal troops from the south. at the request of the secretary of war, the union army invaded south carolina's palmetto state and forbade the secession of its charleston harbor and coastal areas. the federal troops had occupied south carolina and, while they were there, wilson also successfully defended the capital of the new confederacy and helped some 125,000 men who fled the state to escape being drafted into a state militia for possible service in the southern army. post-proclamation of the secession of texas, wilson played a prominent role in the occupation of texas city, louisiana. ulysse grant, george b. mccllellan, ambrose burnside, and joseph hooker were all generals of the union army. mccllellan, an esteemed graduate of west point, resigned from his position as commander of the army of the potomac and commanded the forces in virginia, and eventually northern virginia. during the entire war, mccllellan never achieved much success. grant, who admired mccllellan's abilities, took the helm of the army of the potomac and won the war.

south korea's president kim daejung, who was the only candidate to have won a majority of the vote in the presidential election in late march, and who won an equally strong victory in the national assembly, is still determined to work hard to build peaceful relations with north korea on the basis of mutual trust. he will, for instance, try to press the north, without expecting that it reciprocate in kind, to put the issue of korean reunification back on the agenda, [26] and to find ways to help ordinary north koreans have a better life. kim has been committed to his policy to pursue both economic reform and denuclearization through direct talks with the north. in mid-april, a joint south-north forum on the issue of reunification was held in the north korean border city of kaesong. the south and the north are preparing to hold a second round of talks in seoul.

sens. barack obama, george voinovich, and joe lieberman voted for the bush-cheney administration's attempt to force judicial review of the pending dadt repeal under the vague "military necessity" clause of the war powers act. of course, this procedure is futile, given that the supreme court has already struck down this part of the legislation.² it's a really lousy thing for the representatives of the u.s. congress to do. (and if you want to have a measure of disdain for the quality of legislation coming out of congress, just look at the content of most of the statutes passed in recent years.) although he was a pretty lousy president, bush was actually a pretty decent man, and it pains me to say this, but i would far rather have his father in the white house than bush or clinton or obama or any of these others who have held that office in the last several years. 5ec8ef588b
