chiral construction of porous organic cages for molecular recognition. The design and assembly of porous organic cages remains a challenge, due to the difficulty of combining topology with functional groups. Herein, we report a facile and non-metal-assisted supramolecular approach for the construction of a highly porous CO(2) selective, chiral host. In contrast to many previous covalent cage assembly approaches, only microporous cages are accessible from dynamic polymers. The approach is based on the flexibility of a functional polyethylene backbone, and uses intramolecular interactions to thread a macrocycle through the backbone. The resulted microporous cage is chiral and is a promising host for CO(2). Latest News INDIA - Jan 21, 2015: Green revolution from Aryabhatta to Jawaharlal Nehru: A brief history HISTORY OF FARMING IN INDIA In this section of our website, we are going to take a look back at agriculture and the Green Revolution. History of Indian Agriculture Agriculture is the oldest occupation of mankind and an essential aspect of life in India. Agriculture is a primary source of employment in India. It is considered as the backbone of Indian economy and a major contributor to India's gross domestic product (GDP). The first farmers in India were Homo erectus. The invention of the terracotta, pottery and bronze age in India took place about 5000 BC. Agriculture and agriculture based industry have been a part of Indian culture since prehistoric times. Farming in India has been an important activity of human civilization since then. The Indian civilization, which has been widely spread in the eastern part of India, was called Indus Valley Civilization (EIA). In 1400-1000 BC, the first farming communities in the country started to move towards irrigation and farming. Some of the settlements included

Harappa and Mohenjodaro, which are also archaeological sites with cultural heritage sites. A new ethnic and cultural group named Aryans arrived in the Indian subcontinent in 1500 BC. The number of Aryans in India increased gradually. In the next few hundred years, many agricultural innovations and new techniques including infrastructure development, land reclamation, crop collection, crop storage, crop diversification, developed in India. The Bahubali, Mahabali and Satyasena are some of the names that indicates the contribution of some of the ancient Indian kings in improving agriculture. All these things were not enough to make agriculture to flourish in India. New findings also contributed to the progress of agriculture in India. The Aryabhatta's arithmetic contributed for the improvement of agriculture. Aryabhatta's achievement in the mathematics also motivated other kings and the farmers to find a solution for the existence of humans. The other thing that motivated to improve the agriculture in India was agriculture based industry. The city centers were built up with more ease of modern transportation, and there was a wide spread of trade. However, these efforts were limited to the wealthier people. The great contribution of the kings that motivated the ordinary farmers to bring a change in the conditions of rural agriculture and live a comfortable life. It has also been stated that the success rate of agricultural production is the biggest in the world.
