

if you only need to view the website, you will never see the page anyway. respect that you are viewing the website, and dont try to do anything else on your computer. in this case, you need to use windows internet explorer 7 or higher. internet explorer 9-11 will not play the video. unfortunately, there is also no way to turn javascript off on internet explorer. with internet explorer 9 and above, the support for the site is better than with internet explorer 8. the low tech solution is to use netscape navigator to see the site. it is similar to internet explorer 6 but not as well integrated with the rest of the.. that's the basic set of features, and we'll now move on to the next most important topic. html5 and css3 are not stand-alone languages. they are dialects of html and css. they both need to be seen as tools and techniques designed to work together, and they must work across all browsers, platforms, and devices. if you are using css3 where you wanted to use html5 attributes, or vice versa, you are in fact running afoul of both html5 and css3. many of the new features in html5 are actually changes to html, which means its important to know html5 markup and structure.. a question you are probably asking yourself is: is there a way i can view a web page in my web browser that does not contain any markup or css that uses html5 or css3 techniques? the answer is yes, but its certainly not easy. if all you want to do is just view a page without injecting markup, css3, javascript, or much of anything else, then you need to turn off the ability for browsers to add or alter html and css. you must go to your browser's settings and turn off the ability to let it "manage.." this html and css on your page.
