After performing the normal test to identify the hardware fault, we need to dump the program data from the firmware storage. This process is called Flash Dump File and this is normally done manually. But now a days there are many software available in the market which are available to perform the task automatically and we call it an Auto Flash Dump File. They have many features like checking RAM, CPU, Input devices, output devices, PIC, Firmware storage, Firmware decoding, debugging and many more. The gt-media P51 is not present in the dump file. Check with your vendor for further information on device upgrades. Please give me some solution as I cannot download the gt-media device from the previous versions.
