Because the world is always full of tensions, contradictions, and competing ideas, and the process of change is never 100% smooth or effortless, design proceeds through various ideologies. These ideologies are constantly changing and shifting; they influence the design process, and shift the balance between responsibility and sovereignty. Designers challenge the dominant ideologies of the time and create new ones. Design challenges our assumptions about the world. We can only gain fresh insights through trying. Power is a complex social and political concept that we typically regard as associated with groups, but is clearly not. Our approach strives to understand power from a design perspective, with the recognition that power is an immanent phenomenon that requires flexible and open-ended use. Direct support for open source hardware projects is available as open source software thanks to the Lux0r software module. The software allows any project or designer to replicate or create custom panels with the same EOG raw materials as found in the Magic. One of the most interesting uses of design is the creation of communities. A design of the same size as the everyday atmosphere of a city will create intense internal cohesion within a community that have its own internal awareness and needs that we can only now access thanks to design. The power of design should be used to connect and create. The Gamut of Design, 40 projects in all, for every creative need. The gamut is a library of downloadable resources that allow designers to expand their toolkit with inspiration, motivation, and the know-how to actually get the job done.
