The Navy awarded a contract for construction of about 10 Type-2 frigates worth about $34 billion. Lockheed Martin (NYSE: LMT) was awarded a $5.3 billion contract for design and construction of about 55 frigates, according to an announcement made by US Navy on Thursday. This is the second follow-up contract awarded by the Navy for the construction of the frigates as its first contract for the first batch of six frigates expired in October 2017. The shipbuilding contract will build the frigates for the Navy at Fincantieri's Marinette Marine shipyard in Wisconsin. Marinette Marine was previously owned by VSE Corporation. The frigates will be "designed to integrate the Lockheed Martin Aegis Combat System, the proven combat system designed for the U.S. Navy's attack submarine fleet," according to the release. The frigate contract would be valued at $3.8 billion, according to the release. The first contract for the frigates was worth $5.3 billion. Design, integration and testing will be done by the Navy Bureau of Weapons. Subcontractors will be selected later this summer, according to the release. This isn't a very interesting picture, but what you are seeing, is red keratin from the tail feather of a rook. As you can see, it's hanging from the side of the bird's coat. You have the choice of buying it from a bird shop, or I can get it for you if you want it. I may be a bit sick of all this plastic, but I remember when I was a kid, I used to go out walking in the woods, and at the time the leaves were really bright coloured, this was then compared to me having yellow hair, now 04aeff104c
