Antibodies to the thyrotropin (TSH) receptor of the thyroid gland (TGR) represent a causative agent in human autoimmune thyroid diseases and pose a problem in the treatment of thyroid cancer by 131I therapy. To generate mice in which TGR antibodies could be induced by expression of an antibody binding site in the native TGR gene, a human gamma1-TSH receptor cDNA, harboring an I epsilon 5 V kappa 3 constant region, was introduced into murine embryonic stem cells by homologous recombination. The transgenic mice were screened for the presence of TGR antibodies in the serum of transgenic mice and their newborn offspring and compared with controls by indirect immunofluorescence. TGR antibodies were found in the serum of both transgenic and non-transgenic mice. A dose-dependent effect was observed on the level of TGR antibodies in transgenic mice. These data suggest that expression of an antibody binding site in the native TGR gene by homologous recombination represents a viable approach to induce production of antibodies to the TSH receptor in vivo.Luciano Amati Luciano Amati (14 January 1903, Cagliari – 18 January 1998, Pisa) was an Italian painter, who was a pupil of Aristide Muca in Turin.
