Parents have been warned to be careful when asking children to perform chores on offer on social media after a toddler died last week after offering to help his parents buy their Christmas presents. The 3-year-old died in intensive care after being taken to hospital with pneumonia-related breathing difficulties after providing a code - "P1" - to a stranger who asked him to help buy a present for his mum. Play Video 1:01 'My only son is dead': parents of rescued boy describe anxiety of his recovery Two days later, the boy's father, Jawad Ali, posted his picture on Facebook with the plea for help to find "P1". Many of his social media followers guessed correctly within minutes that the boy had died and an outpouring of sympathy soon followed. Ali wrote on Facebook: "My son died giving up his life to buy his mum's Christmas gift. If only I could get one more chance to buy her a present." A post from Justina, a popular Facebook group for parents with children under 10, shared the tragic news of the toddler's death while asking for help to find his parents. It highlighted the dangers of offering services to strangers on the internet. "This is crazy! Thank you to our group for sharing and reminding us what can happen when we are approached by stranger," wrote one of Justina's 968,000 followers. "My son is only 3. How many of his friends are online asking for help? This is crazy!" Following news of the toddler's death
