Well, we want to provide a smooth and seamless experience to our customers. As much as we can, we're going to focus on the UX and usability - something that has been missing in the camera app space so far. Photography is at the heart of this new app and we've spent a lot of time working to build a next-generation camera app that allows you to work with every aspect of your images, from shooting to editing. We've revamped the camera app from the ground up and combined innovative technology with a clean and intuitive UI. If you're a seasoned professional, Photoshop is still what you use to edit your images; however the app now extends to the point of capture - helping you to unlock your creative potential on the go. Locally, let's say I've taken a photo, and I want to add a GoPro lens filter that transforms the image? The mobile app will now let me apply that filter, add artistic effects, and even adjust the default photos settings. In addition, we've built a powerful AI engine that can understand and adapt to the settings in your environment and photos you shoot. To achieve the best results, it's going to automatically detect things like flashing lights, camera motion, and exposure settings, and apply intelligent corrections to your shots.

AI represents a huge leap in how a photo app can be made, and it will undoubtedly push photography forward- particularly in the tech industry. An app that makes the most of AI can both lead camera usage and provide the best possible experience at the point of capture.
