Its name is derived from the way in which it was used - as dots, dashes, and other characters on a telegraph key were sounded out, one after the other, to indicate letters of the alphabet and numerical figures. Each character is represented by a series of seven dot-dash (dahdah) or eight dash-dot-dot (dahdahdah) sequences of short and long sounds. The sequence of short and long sounds is called a dot-dash, dash-dot, or . See the box below to learn more about the morse code. A code is simply a series of dots and dashes repeated at regular intervals. The dots (or morse code symbols) and dashes are called "markers" or simply
