The Botswana Defence Force maintains a small but well equipped force which plays an important role in the maintenance of internal peace. It is also responsible for international peacekeeping. The BDF was formed in 1966 as an independent service and has undergone many changes. It is a military force of the same name and not a branch of the National Army. It is headed by a Major General as its Commander-in-Chief, who is appointed by the President of Botswana. The Ministers of Defence and National Security Affairs are also military officers, although their rank is lower than the Commander-in-Chief. The military is divided into four branches,
